Pamela Staker

Pamela Staker is a Chicago-based abstract painter and sculptor who transforms everyday materials like wire, cardboard, spray paint, gold leaf, and screen mesh into suspended sculptural forms. She holds a BFA in painting from the University of Illinois, and her award-winning work is featured in numerous private and corporate collections, including The Sophy Hotel, the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago and Vanderbilt University. Pamela collaborates closely with art advisors, interior designers, architects, and individual clients to create site-specific commissions and enhance spaces with her vibrant, abstract pieces. Her joyful and energetic process integrates urban symbols, geometric shapes, figurative elements and natural accents, resulting in animated fragments of modern life.

Sonya Benham

Sonya Lee Benham is a Chicago-based fiber artist exploring the opposing ideals inherent to the medium. Her work is both art and craft, retro yet contemporary, playful but deliberate. These tensions and the assumptions they are based in are what she finds so compelling about fiber art. In her practice, Sonya blends traditional macrame with sculptural wrapped fiber, weaving, sewing, and decorative knotting to create unique wall decor. She uses a wide variety of materials including rope, yarn, string, twine, metallic cord, and leather to create work that is full of texture and contrast. The combination of urban and organic structures is yet another dichotomy that serves as the primary inspiration for her creations. Other influences include the work of fellow artists particularly in ceramics, sculpture, and painting.

Ramin Takloo-Bihash

Ramin Takloo-Bighash is an Iranian born and Chicago-based multi-disciplinary artist. In his work, Ramin explores immigration, war, trauma, isolation, and imprisonment—experiences that are very personal to him. Ramin searches for that elusive “it” that gets eliminated from one’s life when a person has been subjected to trauma over long stretches of time. Persian calligraphy, and its incarnations in painting, sculpture, and cartography, forms the core of Ramin’s artistic practice. His practice also includes writing, photography, and film. Ramin received an MFA in art from the University of Illinois at Chicago in 2023, and he’s a member of the Agitator Art Collective in Chicago. He is a professor of mathematics at UIC.

Dee Clements

Dee Clements is a process-based artist with interests in materials, craft, and ethnography. She holds an MFA in 3D Design from Cranbrook Academy of Art and a BFA in Fiber and Materials Studies and Sculpture from The School of The Art Institute of Chicago. Her practice examines women’s roles in society and their unseen labor through the lenses of craft and art, feminism, ethnography, and patriarchy. The curvaceous, often matronly, saggy, lumpy, bulbous forms of her woven vessels and objet d’art are metaphors for what women hold and how their societal roles relegate them to specific crafts that have historically been deemed “Women’s Work.” Her work is represented Nina Johnson Gallery in Miami, FL.

Jeff Cote

Jeff Cote sees structure everywhere, even in what others perceive as chaos. The most elemental beginnings of everything fascinates him and he endeavors to understand those elements; how they work together, how they complement, oppose, or rely on each other, and what happens if they are broken apart. In his work, regardless of the medium, he finds himself asking “what if...?” Though he finds it difficult to step away from structure, in every sense, he finds freedom and creativity in that chaos. After retiring at 50, he pursued the creation of art with a private mentor, and today feels happily consumed by art, its various expressions through a range of mediums and a true desire to invoke an emotional response from the viewer.

Donna Drapeau

After receiving her Bachelor of Fine Arts degree at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and completing a rewarding residence at Oxford University, Brookes College, Donna could never have predicted the exotic adventures that lay ahead: years upon years in corporate America. She’s out of the business world now, and her relationship with art has resumed its proper place, she says: in her mind, in her heart and, most importantly, in her daily routine. Through gallery shows and continual exploration with materials and expression, she’s seen her paintings evolve from small shadow-boxed canvases with tight brush strokes and metallic stitching, to large canvases with delicate, fluttering brushwork and vibrant photos with oil pastels playfully scarring the surface. It’s the moments she seeks to explore—how our personal challenges, our transitions and our rebirths interact with the revolving world around us.

Grace Federighi

Grace’s figurative work reflects women’s strong and beautiful complexities which emanate mystery, edge, and sophistication. Her contemporary approach merges abstract strokes and textural layers to ignite feelings of modern romanticism and sensuality. Combining a variety of techniques and mediums, her figures result in timeless elegance of bold work. Grace’s process begins with photographing her models in various poses guided by images she has seen from life’s everyday encounters. Once Grace decides on the image, she adapts a message influenced by the movement of the captured pose or the way a shadow falls on skin. This connection continues to evolve as she paints the figure with intuitive and adventurous execution, at times adding charcoal. Currently Grace is developing new work with nature and spirituality guiding her creative journey.

Sam Goble

Sam Goble, a mixed media artist with a background in ceramics and painting, merges his skill in furniture and object design with a passion for interior design to create pieces that redefine the concept of home comfort. Through the interplay of ceramics and painting, he crafts narratives of nostalgia and innovation, inviting viewers into a realm where form and function harmonize effortlessly. Sam's work captures the essence of domestic bliss, serving as a bridge between aesthetics and functionality.

Samantha Haring

Samantha Haring is an artist and educator from Des Plaines, Illinois. Haring earned their MFA from Northern Illinois University and her BFA from the School of the Art Institute of Chicago. They spent a summer in Italy at the International School of Drawing, Painting, and Sculpture; it was there that they fully developed their commitment to light, color, and observational painting. They teach drawing and design courses in the School of Design at the University of Cincinnati, and they have been a Resident Instructor at Manifest Drawing Center since 2016. They are represented by Gallery 19 in Chicago. Their studio practice is currently based in Cincinnati, where they spend an inordinate amount of time staring at the color of dust.

Steven Haulenbeek

Steven Haulenbeek is a Chicago based artist and industrial designer. He received his bachelor's degree in drawing and sculpture from Hope College in Holland, Michigan in 2002 and his master's degree in Designed Objects from The School of The Art Institute of Chicago in 2006. After working professionally as a furniture designer, he founded his independent design practice in 2010 with an interest in experimental, material, and process-based objects for the home. Steven Haulenbeek Studio is represented by Carpenters Workshop Gallery in Paris, London, New York, and Los Angeles. Steven's work seeks to invent unique production methods by which objects emerge organically. By interjecting uncontrollable variants within his techniques, Steven experiments with the balance between design and serendipity. "Ice-Cast Bronze" is one process within this spirit that utilizes the ephemeral to create permanence, uniting the freezing climate of the Chicago winter with the lost-wax casting process to create uniquely textured objects and furniture in cast bronze.

Melissa Herrington

Melissa Herrington is a contemporary abstract artist currently living and working in Los Angeles, California. She has called Southern California home since 2005 when she received her MFA from Otis College of Art and Design. Prior to that, she spent most of her early career in Atlanta, Georgia and has a BFA from Florida State University. Melissa's aim is to create abstract paintings that are contemplative and evocative, examining the theme of transformation. The organic quality of her textured marks lends an ephemeral feeling, with images that imply fluidity. She uses transparent stains and the opaqueness of color. She explores spontaneous, gestural marks and subtle forms through abstraction. Layers are integral to her imagery and process, using underpainting, graphite lines and subtractive techniques to infuse a work with multiple surfaces.

Michiko Itatani

Michiko Itatani's artmaking process starts with gathering various fragments from experiences, events, documents, literature, history, science, myths, customs, etc. She catalogues those fragments, mutates them, makes images, and lets them interact with each other. Michiko's painting is a diagram of some of the possibilities, consisting of painting vocabularies that are both fascinating and painful at the same time: it is incomplete, fragmented and under inquiry.

Brenda Jackson

Brenda's art is an expression of what she sees in the world every day. She is an observer of the beautiful and mundane aspects of everyday life. Painting gives her a way to be a part of nature and connecting to it gives her a sense of belonging to the world. Her abstract paintings are like puzzle pieces that may appear as fragmented spaces finding their way together -- a place where nature meets humankind. The parts are sometimes difficult to fit together; they're not perfect and are joined in odd, conflicting ways. Her choice of shapes, colors and marks depict the imperfections, energy, chaos, and order that painting brings into her life.

Michael Alan Kaskel

Michael Kaskel is an established interior design magazine photographer who works for both residential interior design magazines and interior designers and architects. When Michael has time off, he likes to work with creating still life photographs that cause the viewer to pause and think about the relationship between death and beauty and how it can be shown visually in a beautiful and artistic manner. He only works with deceased animals/insects that have been ethically sourced and that can be shown artistically and respectfully. His work has received the attention of numerous gallery showings and contests.

Jackie Kazarian

Jackie Kazarian (b.1959, Libertyville, Illinois) is a Chicago-based abstract painter. She received her MFA from the School of the Art Institute of Chicago (SAIC) and holds a BS in Zoology from Duke University. Jackie has exhibited her work in galleries and museums worldwide and her work is in many private and public collections. She has served an art envoy for the U.S. State Department in Kuwait and Syria and received the Lifetime Achievement Award from the Armenian Behavioral Science Association (2019).

Magdalena Krzak

Born in Tarnow, Poland, Magdalena Krzak graduated from art school in her hometown before furthering her education at the University of Rzeszow. Her paintings showcase a unique blend of abstract and figurative forms, with a focus on human nature, particularly that of women. Working spontaneously, she allows her emotions and everyday observations to guide her creations. Her portrayals of women are delicate and feminine, often depicted as nude and vulnerable yet exuding strength. Using outlines filled with vibrant colors and textures, her subjects seamlessly merge with the background while still possessing a captivating presence. The fusion of illustrative and abstract techniques in her work gives it a surreal quality that transports viewers to a different realm. Currently based in Chicago, Illinois, Magdalena Krzak continues to create art that speaks to the power and beauty of the female form.

Laurie Kwo

Laurie is a Hawaiian-born artist based in Chicago, Illinois who is building a following as an abstract painter. Her creative journey, which began at age six, has taken her through the fashion industry and high-end interior design, and sharply attuned her passion for capturing the essence of the world around her. She has produced works for sale in galleries and executed commissioned pieces that are part of private art collections. Her original abstract artwork, sourced from personal experience, is an exploration of classic feminine themes and delves deep into human vulnerability.

Seonyoung Lee

Seonyoung is working on her memories of feelings toward vulnerability. She has self-described "weird skin," with lots of wounds and scars on her body because she gets hurt easily and has difficulty healing. Her profound discomfort with her skin comes in part because it lays bare her own vulnerability. As a weaver, through her skills and material, the goal of her artistic mission is the theme of "overcoming." She recognizes empathy in the emotions tied to vulnerability—feeling weak, incomplete, and sinking into depression when one realizes a lack of strength. She would like to support people in healing their anxiousness, weakness, and distress through her work.

Yvette Lenzi

Yvette's creative spirit, warm heart, and openness to all possibilities has enhanced an undeniable passion for the arts. Growing up in Riverside, IL in a warm family environment formed the heart of the artist she has become today. She has always embraced that art has not defined her; rather her artistic process and how she creates has evolved alongside her life experiences. Her passion led her into a career as an art teacher and now as an independent studio artist behind beloved signature pieces and commission work. Her artwork captures the calm and wild of the world that collectors love because it is serene, balanced, and emotional.

Bobbi Meier

A first look at Bobbi Meier's sensuous sculptures often elicits an amused reaction, but underneath the seemingly lighthearted facades are dark hints of the tragedy and trauma experienced by so many women. Fiber is bound and contorted, disassembled stuffed toys become provocative bits of fur, things that should be soft are hard, and decorative shapes vaguely resemble creases and folds of the body. She is currently a selected artist in a new exhibition, Material Tales, at the Driehaus Museum in Chicago curated by Giovanni Aloï. She earned her MA in Art Education (2000) and MFA in Fiber and Material Studies (2011) from the School of the Art Institute of Chicago. A long-time resident of River Forest, IL, she now splits her time between Chicago and Miller Beach/Gary, Indiana. The series of works presented in this installation were created as a push-back to anxiety, distress, and feelings of helplessness. She offers the viewers a rare chance to touch the art and play with it, engaging their senses and hoping for an interaction that may be emotionally healing, fun, and most likely a little bit awkward.

Adriana Miranda

Adriana was born in Phoenix, AZ and moved to Oak Park, IL with her family at age five. At age 15, she received a scholarship to attend the School of the Art Institute of Chicago, where her professor Katherine Jost opened her eyes to the true value that art holds in her life. Adriana's style focuses heavily on nostalgia and humor. She often jokes that Steve from Blue's Clues inspires her, but that the attitude of her work comes from street and graffiti artist, David Choe. Her biggest inspiration, though, comes from her two children, Avi and Uli. Being a mother fuels the lightheartedness of her work. Today, Adriana has begun to shift her artwork on the roots of her education in impressionism and neo-expressionism.

Nancy Natow-Cassidy

Nancy Natow-Cassidy (b.1956, Detroit, Michigan) is a Chicago and Indiana Dunes based artist. Dan Nelson

Dan is a Chicago artist living in The Edgewater community. He paints stories and moments in time using color and humor. His inspiration comes from people, how they move and how they interact with the world around them and how simple things can bring a smile. He paints the world inside of himself, a world that is happy, fun, joyful, integrated and includes what brings most people joy: their pets. His hope is when someone sees his paintings it triggers their imagination and they come up with a story about what they see. He believes that if he made you smile then his paintings are a success.

Kansai Noguchi

Born on the tranquil shores of Shikano Island, Japan, Kansai's journey as an artist began amidst the whispers of nature and the timeless rhythms of the sea. Drawn to the electric energy of New York City, he found inspiration in the eclectic tapestry of cultures and ideas that define the city's landscape. There, amidst the bustling metropolis, Kansai discovered his true passion—to explore the intersection of music, visual art, and traditional craftsmanship. The potter's wheel became Kansai's canvas, a medium through which he channels the essence of his artistic vision and breathes life into clay. Yet, it was in the fluid strokes of the brush that he found his voice. Inspired by the elegant simplicity of calligraphy, he began to explore the possibilities of painting, using each stroke to evoke emotion and tell a story. Through his art, Kansai seeks to capture the essence of Japanese aesthetics—its delicate balance of beauty and imperfection, tradition, and modernity.

Jonathan Pliego

Fontaine Scarelli

In his work as a contemporary abstract expressionist painter, Fontaine Scarelli draws inspiration from post-apocalyptic films such as The Twilight Zone and The Outer Limits. As an only child, his unique perspective was shaped by a solitary upbringing, fueling an unconventional painting style that allows him to perceive the world in an extraordinarily different manner. For Fontaine, creativity transcends the boundaries of the known into the realm of the unknown. He delves into the unexplored territories of time relativity, weaving a tapestry of dark perspectives illuminated by the flickers of positivity found within the strokes of his brush. Painting, he believes, is not merely a visual expression; it is a therapeutic journey, a cathartic process that transforms the abstract chaos into a coherent narrative of self-discovery. Through his art, he invites viewers to explore the intricate interplay between the shadows and the light, encouraging them to find solace and beauty in the enigmatic landscapes of the mind.

Sara Schneckloth

Sara Schneckloth's studio practice is motivated by the question of how science, imagination, and the body inform one another through the activity of drawing. By combining the visual languages of biology, geology, and physics into large-scale, mixed-media, and interactive drawings, she creates images that speak to the physicality of mark making, the embodiment of memory, and our interpretation of natural systems and phenomena. As it bridges the concerns of traditional illustration, sculpture, and new media, her approach seeks to discover ways in which drawing operates as a site of trans-disciplinary inquiry.

An Associate Professor in the School of Visual Art and Design at the University of South Carolina, she currently resides in both Columbia, South Carolina, and rural New Mexico.

Marketa Sivek

Marketa's journey started in a small town in communist Czechoslovakia during the Cold War. Growing up in communism and the constant presence of never-ending propaganda and fear made it challenging to find freedom in creating or even to understand what it means to create freely. She understood this even as a small girl and felt somewhat rebellious in her determination to paint and write poetry. Before her journey took her to America, she studied at the Faculty of Philosophy at Charles University in Prague. She immigrated to the U.S. in 1992 and continued her artistic journey there. Her work has been featured on the Rachael Ray Show, and in many publications such as Elle Decor, American Art Collector, Chicago Interiors, and Fine Art Connoisseur, and has been part of many corporate and private collections such as Deloitte and the private collection of Oprah Winfrey.
